G. COURSE DESCRIPTION:
Defined as “development that meets the needs of current generations without diminishing the possibility of future generations to meet their own needs”, sustainable development has become a ubiquitous yet controversial catch phrase employed by the World Bank, the IMF, the United Nations and other international development agencies. Critics claim the term is merely a cover for continued neo-colonialism while its proponents argue that it allows space for a genuine consideration of the environmental and social good in policies aiming for economic growth. This course develops students’ capacity to understand these competing claims and develop their own definition of what sustainable development should look like internationally and domestically.
